BOOK IIL CHAPTER L t Lord Kames appointed a Lord of Justiciary. --His character in that department. --His correspondence with Dr Tucker--with Mr Harris of Salisbury--with Dr Franklin renewed--with Dr John Walker. --Letter from Dr Franklin. --His observations on Scottish Music: Fkom the period of the publication of Elements of Criticism in 1762, Lord Kames seems to have, for a few years, devoted himself exclusively to his professional occupation as a Judge. VOL. and A BOOK HI. Lord Kames appointed a Lord of Justiciary. His character in that department. On the 15th of April 1763, he was appointed one of the Lords of Justiciary, the Supreme Criminal Tribunal in Scotland; and that important duty he continued to discharge to the end of his life, with equal diligence and ability, and with the strictest rectitude of moral feeling. He has been censured by some, for severity as a criminal Judge: but he had no other severity than that which arises in a warm and ingenuous mind from the abhorrence of vice; from the hatred of crimes, and the zeal for their suppression. From the difference in the constitution and forms of the criminal courts in Scotland and in England, there is a material difference in the functions of the Judge. In Scotland, where every criminal is allowed on his trial the aid of counsel to conduct his defence, to examine the evidence, to urge every argument in exculpation that can avail either...
